Contract for Teen Volunteers

In order to keep services running smoothly, and to ensure that everyone has a positive experience at the library, it is important that we all communicate clearly. The following contract offers guidelines to be followed while you are volunteering with Henderson Libraries. Please read them yourself and sign at the bottom, and have a parent read and sign as well.

1. I understand that this is a “three strikes and you’re out” environment: if I am given three warnings about my attendance, behavior, or attitude, my time volunteering at the library will be at an end. Major offenses will only be given one strike before dismissal.
2. I will come in at my designated date and time to work, just as if this were paid employment. If I am unable to come in at my designated time, I will contact my supervisor and inform them I will be absent. If I fail to give notice three times I understand that I will no longer be able to volunteer.
3. If I do miss my assigned hours, I understand that I will not be able to come in at a different time to make them up.
4. I understand that I will do the assigned tasks at each shift, according to library staff directions. Staff members try to vary the tasks to keep things interesting, but there will be tasks that do not appeal, just as there is in paid employment. The point of volunteer service is to help in any way I can.
5. If I have finished a project, I will choose another from the task board, or I will wait patiently until a staff member is able to give me direction.
6. Non-volunteer friends or family may not work with or hang out with me during volunteer hours, although they may use the library on their own.
7. I understand that I am expected to have a respectful attitude toward staff and patrons of the library at all times, and that I should set a good example and that I may be seen as a role model.
8. If a patron approaches me with a question, I will inform them I am a volunteer and I will direct them to a staff member on the service desk.
9. I will wear my volunteer tag at all times when working at the library.
